

Andrew Omoding embarks on Craftspace project

ActionSpace [1] Artist Andrew Omoding is taking part in a new action research project with Craftspace as part of the Radical Craft exhibition in partnership with Outside In. In the run up to the exhibition, Andrew's art making process will be observed and documented by anthropologist Trevor Marchand.

Andrew and Trevor will work together at ACAVA's studios in West London over the coming months.

Craftspace [2] is a crafts development organisation pushing boundaries and conceptions of crafts practice, presentation and learning.

Outside In [3] provides a platform for artists who see themselves as facing barriers to the art world due to health, disability, social circumstance or isolation.

Trevor Marchand is a social anthropologist whose research explores skill learning and creative practice.

Look out for more details as the project progresses.
